

2GIG Technologies Announces Purchase Order Agreement with APX Alarm

APX Alarm moves to 2GIG Technologies new wireless security and home management system.

Melville, NY (PRWEB) Oct. 28, 2009 -- 2GIG Technologies announced today that it has signed a purchase order agreement with APX Alarm, a leading full-service residential security company. Under terms of the agreement, APX Alarm will install the 2GIG state-of-the-art security and home management panels in 2010. This follows a successfully completed pre-production test phase with APX Alarm of nearly 2,000 units that were installed earlier this summer.

2GIG's security system panel named Go!Control – the first self-contained, all-in-one security and home management system complete with color LCD touch screen -- will be introduced as part of the existing APX Home security package.

“We are thrilled following a successful beta test program to come to this agreement with an industry leader like APX Alarm,” said 2GIG Technologies, Co-Founder, Lance Dean. “We are confident that new APX customers will be extremely pleased with the service enhancements and simplicity of the system.”

“2GIG has quickly established themselves as a company with exceptional technology and broad applications in the home security industry,” said APX Alarm, Chief Operating Officer Alex Dunn. “We are optimistic that all new APX customers using Go!Control will embrace the added security features and home management capabilities enthusiastically.”
